Single electric wire

The current readings are low in several places, it indicates there is no fault on the fence line.

The current reading is particularly high indicating there is a fault somewhere on the fence line. The significant reduction in current between the two readings (24 A and 3 A) indicates that the fault is located somewhere between these points on the fence line.

Earth wire return

The current readings are low in several places, it indicates there is no fault on the fence line.

The current readings are particularly high indicating there is a fault somewhere on the fence line. The significant reduction in current between readings helps to identify the location of the fault. In this case, the two wires with abnormally high readings may be connecting with each other, causing a fault. The bottom wire has consistently low current readings indicating that this wire is ok.
